3

A résumé is your personal “fact sheet.” It is the only document most job applicants will leave with a prospective employer. It is the main tool employers use to compare you with others. For that reason alone, give great attention to making your résumé be the best it can be.

Résumé Objective

- describe the purpose of your résumé
- customize to match the position you are applying for
- describe skills you bring to the prospective employer
- entice a hiring manager to read your résumé

Copyright © Texas Education Agency, 2012. All rights reserved.

Spend as much time on this section as necessary to create a powerful opening for your résumé. Your Objective or Summary should be two or three lines long at most.

Examples of Résumé Objectives
Education and Training

- To obtain employment in the field of education.
- To secure a position with _____ where I can utilize my _____ skills.
- To obtain a position that will enable me to enhance my skills and knowledge in _____.
- High school Education and Training student seeking opportunity to learn and improve _____ skills.
- To obtain a position that allows me to _____.
- I am seeking employment (internship) _____.

Objectives and Goals: Don't talk about yourself and your career goals. You can do that in the interview.

Avoid such phrases as: "seeking a chance for advancement", or "where my skills will be utilized", or "where I can further my career".

Your goal is to focus on the employer and his or her needs.

Review sample objectives. Have students personalize two examples and share with the class.

Take Inventory of Your Skills

- Organizational, Educational, Communication
- Interpersonal/Ability to work well with people
- Knowledge and experience in _____
- Fluent in both English and Spanish (or other language)
- Fluent in English and conversational Spanish (or other language)

Your résumé should highlight your most marketable skills in such a way that employers are more likely to call you. What are your most marketable skills?

Have students brainstorm types of skills.

What do you enjoy doing? What skills do you most enjoy using on the job or in school right now? What skills would you use even if you weren't paid? Write out your answers.

Employment Record

Jobs - Duties, dates, companies, and addresses of one's present and/or previous work experiences.

Be sure to include all skills and accomplishments that directly relate to your current job objective. Your job experiences can help build your résumé. Don't forget to include military service and volunteer work.

Reference

A person to whom one refers for testimony as to another's character, abilities, etc.

8

Most companies will ask potential employees to provide references: names and phone numbers of persons who can tell them more about you. Be prepared to have this information on hand when inquiring about a job position.

Chronological Résumé

It is the most common type of résumé. It lists and highlights your work experience, education and personal information.

9

The chronological résumé is the style most people are familiar with. Take time to have a well thought out résumé. Your résumé should show your potential employer your progression of skills and experience in the job market.

Functional Résumé

Allows you to focus on your skills when you do not have previous work experience to highlight.

This type of résumé format works well for people with limited work experience, who has been out of the workforce for a while, or who seek to change their careers at some point. This type of résumé focuses more on your skills than on your employment history. This is a good format for a high school student who is looking for their first job. You can list your involvement with extracurricular activities, volunteering activities and accomplishments in high school.

Résumé Tips

- Make it brief and concise
- Make it easy to read
- Make it visually appealing
- Use white or off white paper only, and DO NOT use scented papers!

One page is preferable, more than two pages. Highlight or underline key points. Use the same alignments throughout the résumé.

Résumé Tips

- Proofread your resume. Look for spelling and grammatical errors.
- Use “action words” to highlight your accomplishments and achievements.
- Show YOURSELF Off!!!

A well written résumé is an asset to anyone looking to acquire a job.

“ACTION” Words

- Elected (ex., elected class resident)
- Chosen (ex., chosen tennis team captain)
- Awarded
- Presented
- Voted
- Achieved
- Excelled
- Accomplished

The chronological résumé seems to be the most popular format used. This type of résumé usually contains an objective and/or summary statement and a chronological listing (from most recent to past) of all your employers along with related accomplishments. Educational information is included along with certifications and special skills. Make your chronological résumé descriptive, personal and exciting. Arrange it by time and always add a description of your job duties.

Functional résumés highlight your abilities rather than your chronological work history. You'll still need to summarize your work history. By the time the reader has gotten to that point, he is usually sold on bringing you in for an interview.

Be sure to “Show” yourself off!!
This is your chance to make yourself SHINE!!!

With a great résumé in hand, next comes a successful interview. Make sure you research the company. Are you the right employee for the company and is this the right company for you? During the interview, listen carefully to what is being asked and answer thoughtfully and honestly. Don't ramble or repeat yourself. Dress conservatively in clean, pressed and appropriate clothing. Grooming and personal hygiene is a must!! Be confident but not boastful. Try to be relaxed and not nervous or fidgety. Be a natural and positive. Use proper grammar and turn your phone off.
