

Roles and Responsibilities Across the Lifespan

Using the information you obtained from the activity “Family Lifespan Interview,” select one person about whom to create a storyboard. The storyboard will depict the family lifespan, roles and responsibilities the individual has experienced. You may write or illustrate the information.

A storyboard panel consisting of three empty rectangular boxes arranged horizontally. The first box is connected to the second by a right-pointing arrow, and the second to the third by another right-pointing arrow. A line extends from the right side of the third box, goes up, then left, then down, ending in an arrowhead pointing into the left side of the first box of the second panel.

A storyboard panel consisting of three empty rectangular boxes arranged horizontally. The first box is connected to the second by a right-pointing arrow, and the second to the third by another right-pointing arrow. A line extends from the right side of the third box, goes up, then left, then down, ending in an arrowhead pointing into the left side of the first box of the second panel.

A storyboard panel consisting of three empty rectangular boxes arranged horizontally. The first box is connected to the second by a right-pointing arrow, and the second to the third by another right-pointing arrow. A line extends from the right side of the third box, goes up, then left, then down, ending in an arrowhead pointing into the left side of the first box of the second panel.

A storyboard panel consisting of three empty rectangular boxes arranged horizontally. The first box is connected to the second by a right-pointing arrow, and the second to the third by another right-pointing arrow. A line extends from the right side of the third box, goes up, then left, then down, ending in an arrowhead pointing into the left side of the first box of the second panel.