

True or False: Child Abuse Prevention

Directions: Read the statements below and respond with TRUE or FALSE in the before column. When we complete the lesson, respond to the statements again in the after column. Compare your two sets of answers.

Before PowerPoint™ True or False	Statement	After PowerPoint™ True or False
	A person who reports abuse in good faith is immune from civil or criminal liability.
	According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment of childcare workers is expected to grow by 30 percent from 2010 to 2020, faster than the average for all occupations.
	Shaken Baby Syndrome is not a form of child abuse.
	The Child Protection Services Department investigates reports of abuse and neglect of children.
	According to a publication by U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the educator has a vital role in identifying, reporting, and preventing child abuse and neglect.
	A professional family counselor can help a family identify steps for changing patterns of violence and abuse.
	When parents do not provide food, clothing, and shelter for their children, they can be charged with emotional abuse.
	The types of families most likely to experience family violence are families whose adults experienced abuse as children.
	If not reported, an abuser will probably stop the abuse on his or her own.
	A parent that does not have coping skills or parenting skills can create parental stress that leads to child abuse.
	Special problems such as divorce, family violence, or illness or death in the family do not impact children
	Those with a history of child abuse and neglect are 1.5 times more likely to use illicit drugs, especially marijuana, in middle adulthood	